For those considering a career at the intersection of neuroscience and law, it's common to wonder what degree(s) you need. Is a JD enough? What about a PhD? What about doing both?

The Dana Career Network in Neuroscience & Society will host a virtual panel to explore: reasons to get (and reasons not to get) a JD/PhD; steps you need to talk to pursue a JD/PhD; what doors open after getting both degrees; and how this dual-degree path might align with your goals.

Featured panelists present a range of experiences and approaches to joint degrees. Audience questions and participation are encouraged.
